“Verily it came to pass that 37 followers of King Pete and Queen Ann ventured in a pilgrimage to Prague to celebrate King Pete’s 60th birthday. Sorry cannot keep that up. Dilly Dilly.” Thus spoke Yetti who was so over partied from the November weekend celebrations that you’ll probably have to read more about the goings on elsewhere in this Wingspan to get the full picture.

The big event in November was the celebration for Kent Rep Peter Fisher’s 60th birthday. Yetti has reported that it was just the perfect weekend, with too much food and ale and not enough sleep. Everything was organised by Pete and Ann including flights and the hotel transfer. Friends gathered firstly in a hotel near Stansted. Crowns and regalia were polished ready for a few bows and curtsies later on.

Royal Party prepare for Take-off

Once landed, many took the opportunity for some sight-seeing in the Czech Republic capital - it was fine weather to sit out and have a beer or two.

Some Moles have found the Bar

The royal couple also organised an outing for a Medieval 60th Feast on the Saturday night. What a crazy night that was and not a Goldwing in sight, only the trams, and all present were Wingers. Seating was a bit of a squash and apparently very close to the ceiling. Eating was messy and seconds were demanded. Then it got even more messy because the ceiling got covered with soot after the fire eater act. At least Yetti, Nigel, Rocky and Big John got very childish and a bit grubby after touching the ceiling and then rubbing their hands on their own and other people's faces. Photographic evidence was a bit messy too so I cannot show it here but just imagine lots of black, miner-looking faces. And on the white sheets later on?

Yetti sends huge thanks to Pete and Ann for letting everyone join Pete on his birthday celebration. "Congratulations again and happy birthday Mucker. Where are we going next year?"

Finally, on a charitable point, Taz and Trudy are venturing out to Bangladesh again in February on their Sari run for impoverished girls and women. If you would like to sponsor a sari for £10, please get in touch with Yetti and he will liaise with Taz. Many thanks in advance.
